Shooting Professionally Make sure to use a tripod or a monopod if you're shooting a lot of images. It can be very disorienting to have a hand gripping your camera, and a tripod is critical for creating images with control and steadiness. It's important to make sure you have the right lighting and that you have a properly composed image. Use a white or silver background to eliminate reflections on the lens. It's also a good idea to use a lens hood for any lens you use in low light. By blocking the light, it reduces glare and produces a sharper image.

Also, you should have your white balance set to Auto if you are shooting in sunlight. This is important when you are shooting on a white wall, for example. It will make sure that the image has the correct color temperature. When you take a picture, be sure to focus on the subject. It's also important to be sure that the image has an even exposure, so don't just capture it at the default exposure setting. There is a tendency to grab the shutter release and then review the image in the viewfinder or on the LCD when the light

Determinants of success in Early Years Programmes This paper explores the impact of the Early Years Programmes (EYP) on the achievement of their key goals in a range of longitudinally designed studies involving more than one thousand young children and their parents. EYP are an important part of a child's early learning experiences. They are designed to start before and continue through school age, to enable children to acquire skills, knowledge, attitudes and values that will enable them to become responsible, self-reliant and confident citizens. This study utilises data from the First Australian National Survey of Families and Children, an extensive household survey conducted in 1996, 2001 and 2010 for a representative sample of Australian families with children under five. Data are drawn from a nationally representative sample of 5,000 child focused questionnaires administered to the respondents, representing 55,000 children under five. The paper uses these longitudinal data to examine the determinants of children's achievement of EYP goals. In addition, it uses the data to identify what variables are associated with parents' expectations for their children and whether they themselves achieved the goals they had set. Download full paper: Determinants of Success in Early Years Programmes \(PDF, 466KB\)

About SDI SDI's mission is to accelerate economic growth in developing countries. Our approach is based on four pillars: Change the image of development and reduce the appeal of aid. Make the private sector the primary driver of development. Bring enterprise and product development closer to customers. Increase the share of profits going to the people who need it most. So far, we've helped hundreds of clients build better products, increase their competitiveness, open new markets and reduce poverty. But our impact goes far beyond what we achieve for our clients. By helping to change the image of development, we change the way the world thinks about the private sector, which means we help build a better tomorrow for everyone. From July 2007 to January 2009, SDI was a
